Choice 2 B

We want to revise our policies on density to ensure that we make best use of the limited space in our city and that sites are not under-developed. Do you agree with this? - Yes / No

Short Response

Explanation This seems inflexible, and not based on evidence. What's the current density in the city? How does that compare to other cities? I doubt if it's appropriate to have the same density for every development, irrespective of the demography of the likely residents. For example, one wouldn't expect the same density for a block of flats inhabited by single people and couples with no children as one would if its aimed at households with children, and possibly three generations under the same roof. There's also the inescapable reality of socio-economic aspects: some people can afford four-bedroomed detached or semi-detached houses with big gardens, but many can't, and/or don't want them.

Choice 2 C

We want to revise our design and layout policies to achieve ensure their layouts deliver active travel and connectivity links. Do you agree with this? - Yes / No

Short Response

Explanation This is obviously sensible, and consistent with making the city one that helps people to keep fit and not too dependent on driving.

Short Response

Explanation Please see explanation of my answer to 2B: This seems inflexible, and not based on evidence. What's the current density in the city? How does that compare to other cities? I doubt if it's appropriate to have the same density for every development, irrespective of the demography of the likely residents. For example, one wouldn't expect the same density for a block of flats inhabited by single people and couples with no children as one would if its aimed at households with children, and possibly three generations under the same roof. There's also the inescapable reality of socio-economic aspects: some people can afford four-bedroomed detached or semi-detached houses with big gardens, but many can't, and/or don't want them. it might be necessary to have lower density (I don't like "losing densities").

Choice 3 A

We want all buildings and conversions to meet the zero carbon / platinum standards as set out in the current Scottish Building Regulations. Instead we could require new development to meet the bronze, silver or gold standard. Which standard should new development in Edinburgh meet? - Which standard?

Short Response

Explanation It's important to have ambitious targets: "per ardua ad astra" should be the motto. Zero carbon will be very hard to achieve, but we shouldn't aim lower.

We want to work with local communities to prepare Place Briefs for areas and sites within City Plan 2030 highlighting the key elements of design, layout, and transport, education and healthcare infrastructure development should deliver. Do you agree with this? - Yes / No

Short Response

Explanation I'm in favour of local autonomy, with as much subsidiarity as possible. However, we must recognise that there may be a tension between real autonomy and overarching city-wide goals. If there's a general prescriptive policy determining transport, infrastructure and the rest, what scope will there be for, say, Trinity Community Council to devise a plan that isn't consistent with this in some respects?

Choice 4 B

We want to support Local Place Plans being prepared by our communities. City Plan 2030 will set out how Local Place Plans can help us achieve great places and support community ambitions. - How should the Council work with local communities to prepare Local Place Plans?

Short Response

Explanation Please see answer to 4A. I'm in favour of local autonomy, with as much subsidiarity as possible. However, we must recognise that there may be a tension between real autonomy and overarching city-wide goals. We want to continue to support office use at strategic office locations at Edinburgh Park/South Gyle, the International Business Gateway, Leith, the city centre, and in town and local centres. Do you agree? - Yes / No

Short Response:

Explanation: A tentative "yes". What support will there be? Active, or passive, by not objecting to new proposals? There's also the matter of the premise about premises: Zoom meetings, anyone? It seems very likely that Covid-19 will be the tipping point, saving space, money, energy, pollution and time for all involved. (And what's a "strategic" location? Does it simply mean "big"?)

We want to strengthen the requirement within the city centre to provide significant office floorspace within major mixed-use developments. Do you agree? - Yes / No

Short Response

Explanation There's a logical problem with this. Doesn't a "mixed-use" development necessarily include offices? And how major is "major"? As so often with these questions, there's a frustrating vagueness. My inclination is to let the market decide, within the limits of an overall plan.

Choice 16 B

We want to identify sites and locations within Edinburgh with potential for office development. Do you agree with this? - Yes/No

Short Response

Explanation I think office developers can be relied on to do this; they will then make proposals for CEC to consider. At present the Council doesn't have enough staff for its basic planning functions, so why add unnecessary burdens?

Choice 16 C

We want to introduce a loss of office policy to retain accessible office accommodation. This would not permit the redevelopment of office buildings other than for office use, unless existing office space is provided as part of denser development. This would apply across the city to recognise that office locations outwith the city centre and strategic office locations are important in meeting the needs of the mid-market. Or we could introduce a 'loss of office' policy only in the city centre. - Yes / No

Short Response

Explanation This question is badly worded. To be clear, what my choice means is that I'm opposed to what I understand the "loss of office policy" to be, because I don't see why an office that no one wants any more can't be turned into something else, including housing.

We want to set out the amount expected to be re-provided, clearer criteria on what constitutes flexible business space, and how to deliver it, including the location on-site, and considering adjacent uses, servicing and visibility. Do you agree? - Yes / No

Short Response

Explanation See previous answers: this is far too prescriptive. Remember that a proposal for development in April 2020 makes no sense unless it's going to meet a demand in, say, 2025. Who knows precisely what that demand will be? Who knows what "the amount expected to be re-provided" should be? (In case you're wondering, the answer is "no one".)
